What resonates within?

Reconsider your relationship with the things around you, the people you encounter, and your place in the world.

As an artist, my work encapsulates both experience and impressions originating from my own life and the lives of the people I know, meet, or observe from a distance. As current time becomes memory, my lens develops, and my work chronicles what I have come to see and to know. Incorporating ever evolving colour palettes, movement, and symbolism often through an abstracted lens, my process acts as a reinvestigation of the natural world where I believe we are all rooted. My work sits somewhere between representational and partially recognizable, straddling the physical world and not-so-physical space that we hold inside. The aim is not towards representation or naturalism. My work is symbolic to embody the poetry of a moment. Furthermore, it is a catalyst to bring the viewer to a place of wonder where they can turn inward to build their own connections and deepen their relationship with themselves. Life experiences persist through the tapestry of my work. I seek to bring the viewer into the moment with me with the hope that one might reconnect with their own memory, sense of belonging, or newfound understanding of their intrinsic place in the world.

“walk alone, walk together, walk slow, then start to run”

mixed media on canvas

55” x 109”

This piece explores the evolution of being and growing into a community. Patches of light playfully come through in an emblematic way to represent how people and their light come into our lives to complete us and make us whole. This piece is about walking together through life as we learn to run.

“you stained my heart a little deeper than you thought”

mixed media on canvas

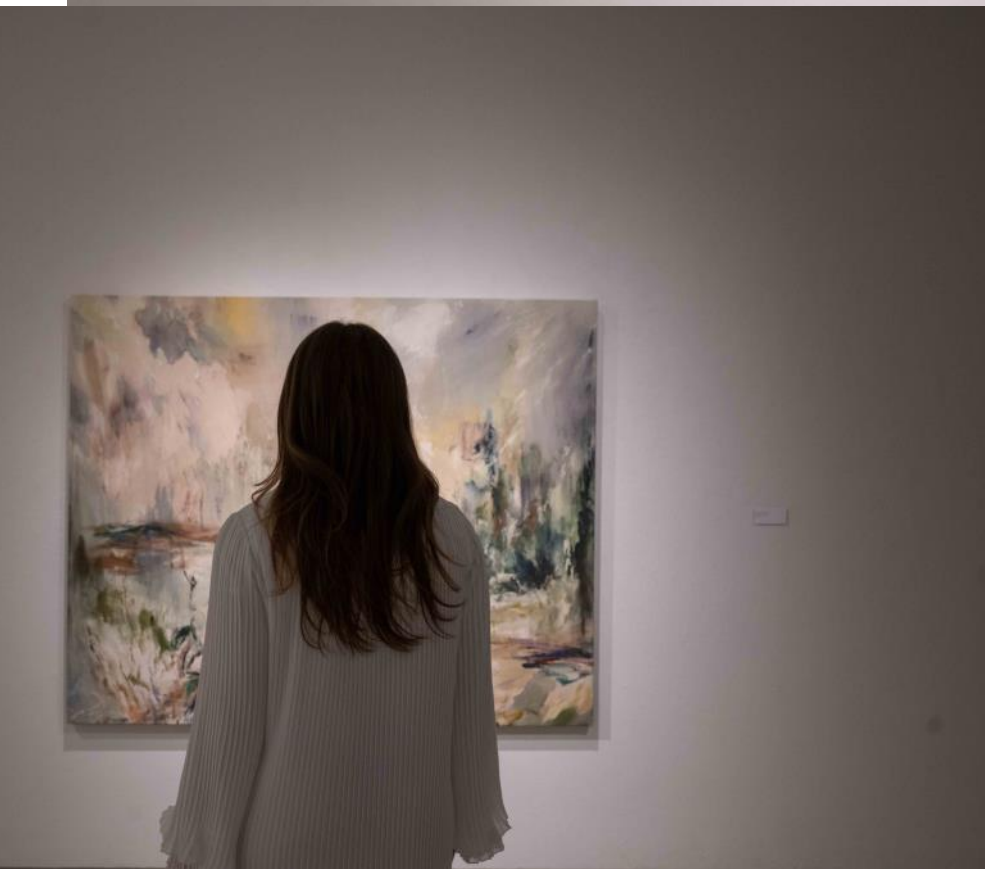

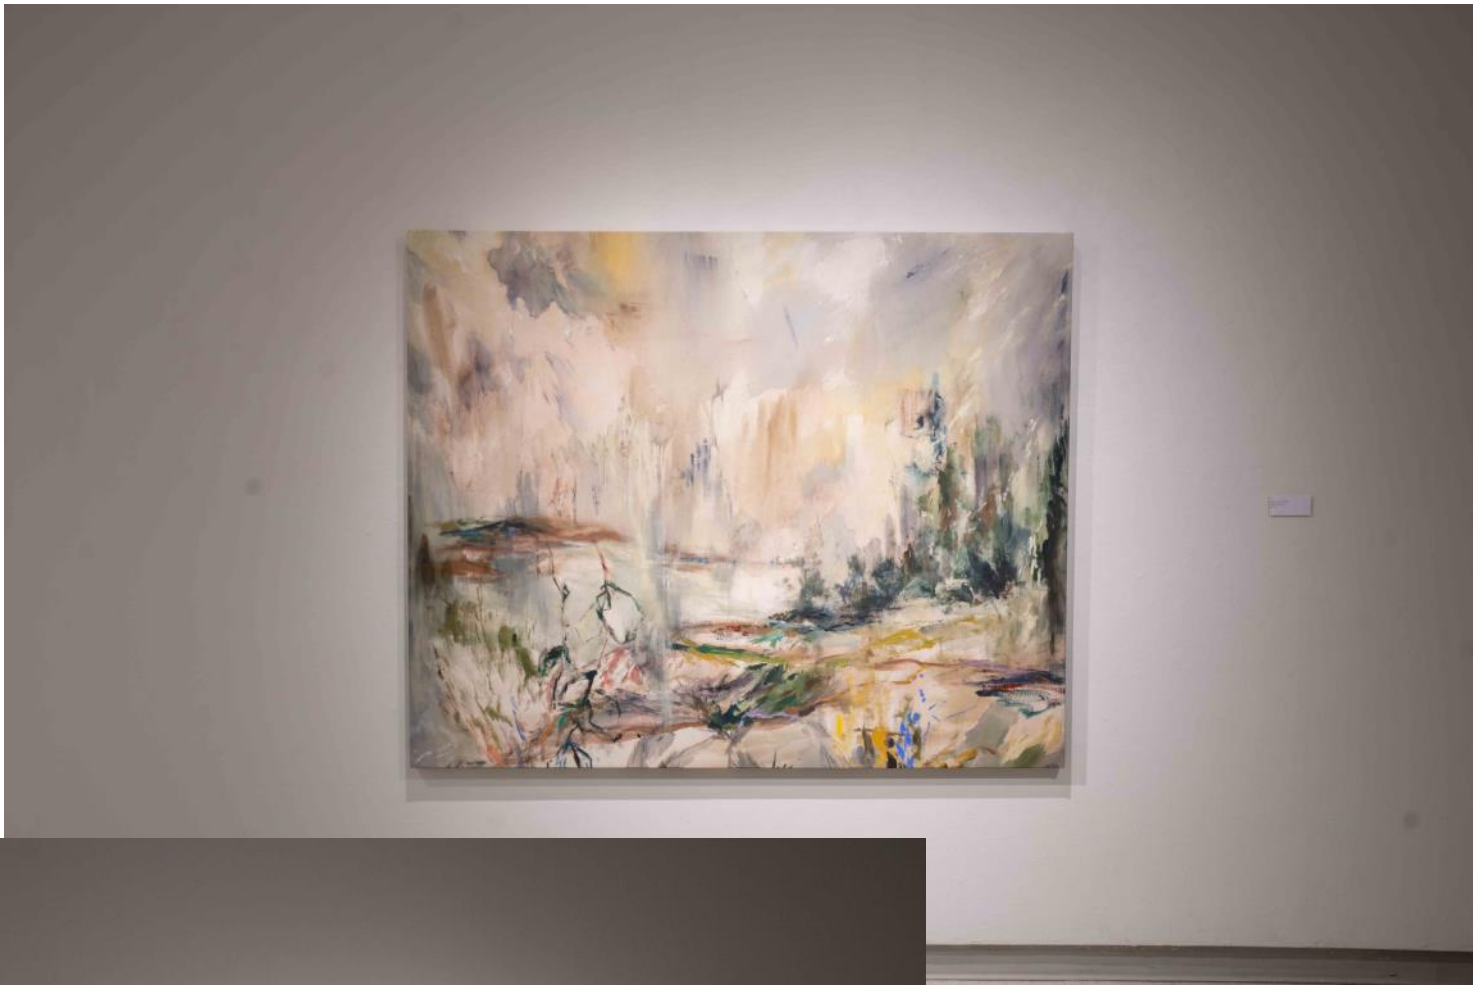

55” x 109”

This piece makes a subtle nod to the Michelangelo’s fresco “Creation of Adam”. Two entities or energy centres are on the verge of collision, posing the question as to how they will look when these two beings collide. This work explores themes of relationship with others whether for only a fleeting moment or for a lifetime. Celebrating both beauty and the messy parts, we come together to make each other whole.

“the rhythm that runs through”

mixed media on canvas

52” x 64”

I believe we all live very rhythmically because life seems to be anything but linear. Areas of intensity mixed with areas of softness note the way that we push through life with such energy at times, and other days are soft and simple. In the same way in groups of people we create a rhythm that runs through our spirits as we navigate the world together.

“I see you more so now than ever before”

mixed media on canvas

55" x 126"

This work is a large scale eight piece multipaneled work that explores identity and coming to terms with the many elements that make someone who they are. Clashing elements like the sky, trees, and land all come together speak to the way that each individual resembles an ecosystem. The multiple panels represent the different parts of who we are as they collide but also work together to create a sense of harmony. The panels are interconnected but also breaking away from each other which is emblematic of the way we develop as our life continues.

“wild is the wind that carries me home”

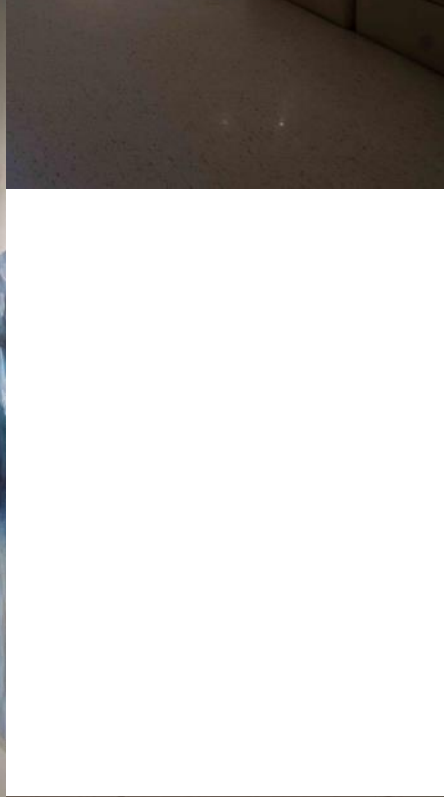

mixed media on canvas

48” x 72”

The experiences that define us can be wild. The white flowers are metaphorical for things lost and the colour growing around and through each flower symbolizes what has grown from each loss. The toughest moments are what carry us home, and often allow us to bloom even brighter than we could have before.

a Heartfelt Thank You

Something I learned very early on was that being an artist is really damn hard. I subsequently learned that most endeavours that are hard are often incredibly rewarding. I'll never be able to adequately thank you with words. Words won't do justice to how meaningful it felt to have 400 people come through to view my work. And beyond that, all the many years of interactions, likes, conversations, advice, and encouragement. I wouldn't be here without the community that lifts me up. Beyond thankful for this community as I finish this chapter of my BFA and embark on my next journey.

with nothing but love,
